

THE JAPAN FOUNDATION CENTER FOR GLOBAL PARTNERSHIP

CGP GRANTEE PUBLICATIONS

English Titles 1991–2002

Mission Statement

The Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership (CGP) was established in 1991 to pursue the following objectives:

- to promote collaboration between Japan and the United States with the goal of fulfilling shared global responsibilities and contributing to improvements in the world's welfare;
- to enhance dialogue and interchange between Japanese and US citizens on a wide range of issues, thereby improving bilateral relations.

To realize these primary objectives, CGP focuses on the promotion of intellectual exchange to encourage global partnership among Japan, the United States, and other nations of the world and on the promotion of mutual understanding at the regional and grassroots levels.

Executive Director's Message

This catalogue was compiled as CGP moved beyond its tenth anniversary in 2001 and introduces the great variety of books and reports that have been published with the support of CGP's grant-making activities. In early 2000, CGP produced a list of grantee publications, entitled CGP Grantee Selected Publications 1991–2000. This list highlighted only a partial group of English titles. In contrast, our newly revised catalogue provides a more comprehensive list of publications and extends to publications produced through the end of 2002. This updated version also reflects efforts to provide more information about Japanese language publications, as well as English. As a result, this volume, entitled CGP Grantee Publications: English Titles, 1991–2002, is part of a two-volume set. The second volume, CGP Grantee Publications: Japanese Titles, 1991–2002, is forthcoming.

Through CGP's grant-making activities, we hope that our grantees are able to produce material that will benefit not only the people who were directly involved in the projects but also a wider audience. To this end, we encourage grantees to include an effective plan of broad dissemination of project results. The publications introduced in this catalogue — along with other methods, such as holding seminars and symposia — are examples of such dissemination efforts.

For example, by making timely efforts to compile project results and by publishing those results in a timely fashion, grantees can have a direct impact on policy debates and civil society activities. Furthermore, in fields for which there is limited existing research or literature, grantees may be able to strengthen the underpinnings necessary to promote dialogue by providing basic information through publications. Particularly for educational projects that promote international understanding, such as curriculum development and research activities, we feel that grantee project goals are truly reached only when material is produced and actually used in a place of learning.

I believe that the literature presented in this catalogue has fulfilled its role in meeting the objectives of the projects. I hope that all of you who share our interests and concerns in global issues and US-Japan relations will apply those lessons broadly in your work. In that way, the products of CGP's grants can be shared by a large number of people, helping to expand a growing network.

As mentioned earlier, this catalogue presents materials that were made available in English, or in both English and Japanese. A second Japanese-language catalogue presenting materials that were made available in Japanese is also being produced, under the title Jyosei Seika Bunken Mokuroku: Nihongo Bunken 1991–2002. We plan to produce an English version of that catalogue in the near future. I sincerely hope that you will find this volume, as well as future volumes, to be interesting and useful resources.

Preface

This catalogue is a source of information about past research and resources, extending to the present, as well as a source of information about organizations active in policy-oriented research, dialogues, exchange, and education. Its pages include many of the substantial works that past and present CGP grantee organizations have produced from 1991 to 2002. CGP has organized these publications into the two categories of Intellectual Exchange and Regional/Grassroots, representing its two grant programs.

The items in the Intellectual Exchange category are rooted in the many policy-oriented research and dialogue projects that universities and research centers have embarked upon over the past eleven years. They include, for example, bound volumes of research findings, policy recommendations, and conference reports. Unfortunately, we were not able to include the great number of single articles that were published in journals, though journals have been included when an entire issue has been dedicated to a certain theme. We should also mention that the copious materials produced by scholars in CGP's Abe Fellowship have also been excluded. The great number and high quality of Abe Fellow publications warrants their own catalogue, which may be forthcoming.

Regional/Grassroots publications gathered in this catalogue also represent a unique variety of works, which reflect the emphasis on grassroots exchange, public outreach, and development of educational resources at the K-12 level. Items in this category include curriculum units, lesson plans, reports from both student exchanges and NPO exchanges, as well as occasional videos or Internet-based resources. These works attest to the common goal of producing useful resources and powerful experiences, which have long-term implications on how individuals in the United States and Japan understand one another. We should also mention that we have excluded listings of publications that were directly commissioned by CGP, such as surveys and evaluations of the field. The focus of this catalogue is on the grantees and the fruits of their labor.

Even though some of these publications may be out of print, we hope that this catalogue is useful in many different ways, not the least of which is to provide an opportunity for people to browse and reflect on a very productive group of organizations. The pages are laid out alphabetically by grantee and each entry includes the grantee name, the publication title, name of author(s) or editor(s), a brief description of the book, publication information, and ISBN/ISSN numbers, when possible. Titles that are available in both English and Japanese include parentheses with romanized Japanese titles. For bilingual publications produced in companion volumes—one in English and one in Japanese—publication information is provided for both.

Indexes are provided to help readers cross-reference and search through the catalogue. These include a Subject Index and a Publications by Year Index. Resources are also provided to help the reader gather more information about organizations of interest and to facilitate networking. Please see the Contact Information for Grantees and Publishers.

CGP would like to encourage readers to use the contact information provided to contact the grantee directly for inquiries about the publications or to learn more about the grantee's most recent initiatives and projects. We would like to apologize if we have unintentionally left out any items. The number of publications listed and described here is limited by CGP's ability to track information in what has proven to be a very dynamic and fluid field of study. We would also like to convey our sincere gratitude to the organizations that have produced these materials, as this catalogue is evidence of their hard work. We look forward to many more years of collaboration.

Alaska at War Committee

ALASKA AT WAR, 1941–1945:
THE FORGOTTEN WAR REMEMBERED
Fern Chandonnet, ed.

Papers from the Alaska at War Symposium that reflect on the issues, personalities, and effects of World War II within the microcosm of the Alaska theater. The conference, held in Anchorage in November 1993, was part of a commemoration of World War II in Alaska, Northwest Canada, and the North Pacific Region, and brought together an international, interdisciplinary group of scholars, historians, American and Japanese soldiers, civilian evacuees, Alaskan civilians, government officials, and descendants of prisoners of war.

American Society of International Law

TRILATERAL PERSPECTIVES ON INTERNATIONAL LEGAL ISSUES: FROM THEORY INTO PRACTICE

Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Junji Nakagawa, and Linda C. Reif, eds.

A book that addresses issues of compliance, human rights, arms control, and international trade. This volume examines linkages among national and international law, the need for adequate governmental administrative capacity, and the central role of monitoring and disclosing information with regard to these issues. The book is the result of a trilateral symposium on international law held in May 1996, which brought together representatives of the Japanese Association for International Law, the American Society of International Law, and the Canadian Council on International Law.

Asia Society

SOUTH ASIA AFTER THE TESTS: WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

Mai Shaikhanuar-Cota, ed.

A report from a workshop held in July 1998 to discuss the causes and consequences of nuclear weapons testing in India and Pakistan. Twenty-three regional experts, including nuclear scientists, cultural studies scholars, regional security and arms control specialists, business leaders, economists, and members of the World Bank and United Nations, attended the one-day workshop. Issues discussed include the motivations for the tests and their domestic political implications, issues of weaponization and deterrence as follow-up measures to the tests, regional and strategic balance, and economic weakness and the impact of sanctions.

(New York, NY: Asia Society, 1999, 44 pp.)

The following three reports are from a multi-year dialogue project on issues concerning Northeast Asia that was held in collaboration with the Japan Institute for International Affairs.

PROSPECTS FOR INTERNATIONAL
COOPERATION IN NORTHEAST ASIA:
A MULTILATERAL DIALOGUE:
ECONOMIC ISSUES

A summary of a conference that addressed the evolving economic issues in the region such as trade and development assistance, on the international, regional, and national levels.

(New York, NY: Asia Society, 1995, 32 pp.)
ISBN: 0-87848-515-5

PROSPECTS FOR INTERNATIONAL
COOPERATION IN NORTHEAST ASIA:
A MULTILATERAL DIALOGUE:
ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES

A summary of a conference that addressed environmental issues and ways in which official and unofficial cooperation can develop among various countries in the region. The report addresses issues such as air pollution, energy efficiency, and technology transfer.

(New York, NY: Asia Society, 1995, 36 pp.)
ISBN: 0-87848-514-7

PROSPECTS FOR INTERNATIONAL
COOPERATION IN NORTHEAST ASIA:
A MULTILATERAL DIALOGUE:
POLITICAL ISSUES

A summary of a conference that focused on the necessary conditions and mechanisms for cooperation on political issues and whether they are developing in the region. Topics include the balance of power, collective security, multilateralism, and economic integration.

The Atlantic Council of the United States

AN APPROPRIATE ROLE FOR NUCLEAR ENERGY IN ASIA'S POWER SECTOR

A policy paper summarizing the results of a multilateral dialogue that examined the role of nuclear power in the energy sectors of Asian countries. This report addresses the numerous challenges presented by the planned rapid development of nuclear power in Asia and offers recommendations on how such challenges could be met. Topics include adhering to strict safety standards in nuclear plants and strengthening the "safety culture"; improving the effectiveness of management and disposal of nuclear wastes and spent fuels; determining the cost effectiveness of nuclear power; and understanding and responding to public attitudes toward nuclear power.

(Washington, DC: Atlantic Council of the United States, 1997, 52 pp.)

The Brookings Institution

The following publications are part of a series written by some of the world's leading economists, political scientists, foreign policy specialists, and government officials for a project entitled "Integrating National Economies: Promise and Pitfalls." The authors explore the deepening integration of the world economy and related issues, including competition and antitrust policies, product standards, labor market relations, tax policies, environmental standards, corporate governance policies, and budgetary and monetary policies.

COMPETITION POLICIES FOR AN INTEGRATED WORLD ECONOMY

F. M. Scherer

An analysis of competition policy options for an integrated world economy. Scherer discusses the integration of international trade policies; the competition policies that nations and trading blocs implement to channel producers' behavior in procompetitive directions; and the strategies nations and individual enterprises pursue to enhance their trading advantage in the international marketplace. He traces the intellectual foundations and subsequent evolution of these three policy domains, closely investigating points of conflict. He concludes with a proposal for new international competition policy instruments that would curb restraints on competition while infringing minimally on national sovereignty.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 133 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-7797-3

DEVELOPING NATIONS AND THE POLITICS OF GLOBAL INTEGRATION

Stephen Haggard

An examination of the positions of developing countries in the international trade regime, focusing on the middle-income nations of East and Southeast Asia and Latin America. Haggard argues that advanced developing countries have become strong supporters of the multilateral system and that the extent of discriminatory regionalism has been overstated. He asserts more serious threats are the lure of bilateralism and the effort of advanced industrial states to impose standards on developing countries that are inappropriate or politically counterproductive.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 150 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-3389-5

ENVIRONMENTAL AND RESOURCE POLICIES FOR THE WORLD ECONOMY

Richard N. Cooper

A conceptual framework for the international community assessment of issues concerning the environmental impact of economic activity and the use of natural resources. Cooper argues that the exploitation of natural resources can be properly regulated by national policy and market developments.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 94 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-1545-5

FINANCIAL INTEGRATION, CORPORATE GOVERNANCE, AND THE PERFORMANCE OF MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES

Mitsuhiro Fukao

An analytical comparison of the structures of corporate governance in France, Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Fukao shows how differences in structure in Germany and Japan have led to stronger shareholder participation in companies, as well as more stable management and corporate relations with creditors, suppliers, and employees, in comparison with the United States and the United Kingdom. He also notes that financial markets have created strong pressures for more uniform rules on insider trading, takeover, and accounting and disclosure practices.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 124 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-2987-1

FINANCIAL REGULATION IN THE GLOBAL ECONOMY

Richard J. Herring and Robert E. Litan

A review of the measures adopted to regulate international financial institutions. The authors project potential changes in the international marketplace and the implications of those changes for regulatory policies. The book concludes with proposals designed to promote control of financial institutions by the market rather than by regulators.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 187 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-5283-0

HOW CHINA OPENED ITS DOOR

Susan L. Shirk

A review of how China ended its long-held policies of economic isolationism and rejoined the world economy during the period from 1979 to 1994. Shirk describes how China's political institutions have shaped economic policy making and produced reforms characterized by gradualism, administrative decentralization, and particularism. She addresses topics including the establishment of special regional zones, decentralization of trade management, reform of the foreign exchange regime, and opening of the domestic market.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 120 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-7853-8

INTERNATIONAL COORDINATION OF NATIONAL STABILIZATION POLICIES

Ralph C. Bryant

An analysis of the various issues that stem from the growing tension between national political sovereignty and economic integration. As economic integration intensifies cross-border spillovers among national economies and complicates national policy making, national governments may benefit from coordinating with one another on decisions concerning macroeconomic stabilization policies. The author discusses the degree to which governments could cooperate in setting policies and outlines the potential benefits and disadvantages of such arrangements.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 163 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-1255-3

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTIONS AND THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF INTEGRATION

Miles Kahler

An analysis of the evolution of international institutions, amidst changes in the international economic environment. The divergent paths of GATT and the International Monetary Fund illustrate how economic integration can undermine some international institutions and strengthen others. While the open and flexible architecture of GATT was able to absorb an emerging agenda of behind-the-border issues, increased financial integration ultimately undermined the Bretton Woods exchange rate system. The author concludes that no single institutional model guarantees successful international collaboration.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 144 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-4821-3

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Barry Eichengreen

An analysis of international monetary options for the twenty-first century. Eichengreen argues that governments will not be able to prevent exchange rate fluctuations from exceeding pre-specified limits. Therefore, pegged but adjustable exchange rates, crawling pegs, and other regimes in which governments announce limits in advance for exchange rate fluctuation will not be sustainable. Also, countries that have traditionally pegged their currencies will be forced to choose between floating exchange rates and monetary unification.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 171 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-2275-3

LABOR MARKETS AND INTEGRATING NATIONAL ECONOMIES

Ronald G. Ehrenberg

An examination of the influence of labor market institutions, policies, and policy implementation on trade flow, and capital and labor mobility. Ehrenberg argues that economic integration can take place even among nations with very different labor market standards and policies. He contends that the political process can benefit trade and labor capital mobility if countries systematically develop ways to standardize some of their labor market policies. Ehrenberg also discusses the pressures on labor market institutions and policies that arise from economic integration.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 126 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-2257-5

LEADERSHIP ABROAD BEGINS AT HOME: US FOREIGN ECONOMIC POLICY AFTER THE COLD WAR

Robert L. Paarlberg

A book that addresses the need for a new leadership style better suited to post-Cold War realities. Paarlberg argues that the United States should attempt fewer policy initiatives abroad and concentrate first on putting in place wise economic policies at home. Through case studies of international fiscal policy coordination, agricultural policy reform, and international environmental policy, Paarlberg illustrates that international cooperation abroad can be facilitated by the establishment of sound domestic policies in the United States.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 102 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-6803-6

PRODUCT STANDARDS FOR INTERNATIONALLY INTEGRATED GOODS MARKETS

Alan O. Sykes

An examination of the technical barriers to international trade in goods. Sykes discusses impediments to trade created by divergent national product standards and regulations and by the systems that trading nations use to verify conformity with applicable standards and regulations. He traces the history of the problem, sets out the available empirical evidence on its importance, and uses economic theory to suggest when differences in standards and regulations may be desirable or undesirable. He also explains how an ideal conformity assessment system would operate.

INTELLECTUAL EXCHANGE
GRANTEE PUBLICATIONS

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 214 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-8295-0

REFORMING PLANNED ECONOMIES IN AN INTEGRATING WORLD ECONOMY

Barry P. Bosworth and Gur Ofer

A review of the progress made by formerly centrally planned economies to establish markets and the institutions required to support them. The authors examine the changes in such foreign economic institutions and patterns of trade that have emerged during the first few years of the reform process. They highlight the chief issues that any successful reform program must address and emphasize the extent to which numerous changes in both domestic and foreign economic activities are interrelated. They argue that, although reform of the external trade regime is critical, the major barriers to rapid and successful transition to a market-based economy and the growth of external trade are mostly domestic.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 186 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-1047-X

REGIONAL INTEGRATION: THE WEST EUROPEAN EXPERIENCE

William Wallace

A review of the historical circumstances under which the institutions of West European integration were established. Wallace presents empirical data on and an analysis of the European experience in integration and assesses the problems that arise from tension between globalization and regional integration.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1994, 142 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-9223-9

REGIONALISM, MULTILATERALISM, AND DEEPER INTEGRATION

Robert Z. Lawrence

An analysis of the achievements and major risks concerning regional efforts at economic liberalization in Europe, the United States, and the Asia-Pacific. Lawrence argues that neither past experience nor traditional trade theory provide an adequate guide to answering the question of whether regional arrangements undercut or contribute to a more successful international economy. While regional arrangements could result in new forms of protectionism through antidumping and countervailing duties, some arrangements are open to enlargement and can create incentives for expansion.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1996, 123 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-5181-8

TAXATION IN AN INTEGRATING WORLD

Vito Tanzi

An analysis of how changes in the economic environment affect tax systems. Tanzi addresses the conflict between traditional tax principals and policies and contemporary developments stemming from the increasing globalization of economic activities and the growing integration of the world's economies. For example, capital and highly skilled labor have become more sensitive to differences in effective tax rates and react to these differences. Tanzi explains these and other phenomena, paying special attention to administrative and practical considerations that may limit the solutions to these conflicts.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 168 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-8297-7

TECHNO-NATIONALISM AND TECHNO- GLOBALISM: CONFLICT AND COOPERATION

Sylvia Ostry and Richard R. Nelson

An analysis of the relationship between the globalism of firms and the nationalism of governments. The authors explore the interplay of cooperation and competition that characterizes high technology and propose some policy options to enhance global welfare and minimize friction.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 117 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-6673-4

TRADE POLICIES AND DEVELOPING NATIONS

Anne O. Krueger

A volume that highlights the importance of an open international trading system for developing nations. The author notes that most developing nations should be willing to enter into arrangements for deeper integration. These measures, however, must promote efficient operation of the international economy. Numerous issues such as labor standards and environmental protection are examined in light of protectionist arguments against integration. The author asserts that developing countries also need more time than developed nations to implement the steps needed for successful integration.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1995, 124 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-5055-2

A VISION FOR THE WORLD ECONOMY: OPENNESS, DIVERSITY, AND COHESION

Albert Bressand, Takatoshi Ito, and
Robert Z. Lawrence

A book that reviews developments forcing the world to look beyond reduction of at-the-border trade barriers and explores alternative ways of dealing with global changes. The authors propose a new paradigm of international governance suited to a world of deeper integration as new technology, corporate strategies, and international market pressures undermine the traditional separation between the domains of international and domestic policy. This paradigm consists of a world of clubs in which the nation-state remains a fundamental political unit but joins with other nations in pursuing common objectives.

(Washington, DC: The Brookings Institution, 1996, 111 pp.) ISBN: 0-8157-5183-4

Business-University Forum of Japan

HIGH PERFORMANCE WORKPLACE AND WORK: TOWARDS BUSINESS-UNIVERSITY COLLABORATION FOR THE NEW CENTURY

(NACHI-BEI-KA KYODO SANGAKU WAKUSHOPPU '96: HAIPAFOMANSU WAKUPUREISU & WAKUSU)

Takeda Synzaburo, ed.

A report of a trilateral dialogue among administrators and scholars from Japan, the United States, and Canada that focused on university education and the needs of the business world. The conference was held in Tokyo in October 1996, and participants examined how appropriate skills and human resources can be developed in university education.

(Tokyo, Japan: Business-University Forum of Japan, 1997, 96 pp.)

Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs

THE EAST ASIAN CHALLENGE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

Joanne R. Bauer and Daniel A. Bell, eds.

A volume of essays that provides a middle ground in the debate between proponents of "Asian values" and those who advocate universal human rights. The book contains contributions from North American and East Asian scholars, teachers, and activists with diverse views on human rights and the role of culture. The book offers critical perspectives on the human rights debate, proposals for a human rights regime with increased input from scholars and practitioners in East Asia, information on the cultural traditions in East Asia for promoting human rights, and commentary on the impact of economic development and economic crisis on human rights in East Asia.

(Cambridge, MA: Cambridge University Press, 1999, 394 pp.) ISBN: 0-521-64536-0

The following two reports resulted from a multi-year dialogue project in which a US-Japan task force convened to discuss issues concerning the environment in both countries.

US-JAPAN TASK FORCE ON THE ENVIRONMENT: THE POLITICS AND ETHICS OF GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL LEADERSHIP

Joanne R. Bauer, ed.

A report that addresses the underlying ethical concerns at the Rio Environmental Summit, points of convergence relating to the normative content of policy options, and prospects for US-Japan cooperation on these issues.

(New York, NY: Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs, 1992, 28 pp.)

WHOSE ENVIRONMENTAL STANDARDS? CLARIFYING THE ISSUES OF OUR COMMON FUTURE: A REPORT OF THE FIRST MEETING OF THE US-JAPAN TASK FORCE ON THE ENVIRONMENT

Joanne R. Bauer, ed.

A report on the concerns of those who believe that US-Japan cooperation on the environment is a key to resolving many international environmental crises, as well as to understanding the motivations and assumptions for underlying policy decisions in each country, and the impact of power politics on past and emerging policy.

(New York, NY: Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs, 1992, 26 pp.)

Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

The following volumes are the result of a two-year dialogue project on nonproliferation and arms control issues concerning the United States and Japan. The project was held in collaboration with the International House of Japan. A study group composed of Japanese and American experts was formed to examine thirteen arms control and nonproliferation issues, including how to reduce nuclear weapons, what policies Washington and Tokyo should pursue in dealing with China, theater missile defense, security issues concerning North Korea, and whether the growth of plutonium-based civilian nuclear power programs poses a proliferation threat.

JAPAN'S NUCLEAR FUTURE: THE PLUTONIUM DEBATE AND EAST ASIAN SECURITY

Selig S. Harrison, ed.

A compilation of papers from Asian and American specialists that present differing perspectives on Japan's role in critical nonproliferation and arms control issues. Included is discussion on the controversy surrounding Japan's plutonium-based civilian nuclear power program and the resulting anxieties of neighboring East Asian countries that Japan may become a nuclear weapons power.

(Washington, DC: Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 1996, 120 pp.)

ISBN: 0-87003-065-5

NEXT STEPS IN ARMS CONTROL AND NON-PROLIFERATION (REISENGO NO HIGASHI AJIA TO GUNBI KANRI)

William Clark, Jr., and Ryukichi Imai, eds.

The final report of a two-year US-Japan dialogue on arms control and nonproliferation issues in East Asia and the world.

MEETING THE CHALLENGE OF GLOBAL AGING: A REPORT TO WORLD LEADERS FROM THE CSIS COMMISSION ON GLOBAL AGING

Ryutaro Hashimoto, Walter F. Mondale, and Karl Otto Pohl, commission co-chairs; Paul S. Hewitt, project director

A report representing the culmination of three years of dialogue among members of the CSIS Commission on Global Aging. The commission found that the changes wrought by global aging are fundamental and unprecedented. They pose significant challenges to the ability of nations to sustain current benefits for the elderly as well as to sustain economic growth rates and the recent historic rise in living standards. The commission found that pessimism is not warranted if the nation most directly affected acts promptly to manage its aging transitions and that postponing reforms will lead to greater sacrifice later on. Rising dependency ratios will require industrial nations to examine carefully their pay-as-you-go old age guarantees. In some cases these guarantees are not sustainable in their present form at current tax rates, and will require significant reforms this decade.

(Washington, DC: CSIS 2002, 78 pp.)

ISBN: 0-89206-409-9

TRADE POLICY AHEAD

Ernest H. Preeg

A book that presents an analytic framework for trade policy to accompany the accelerating interaction between multilateral and regional trade initiatives. This study begins with an examination of the changing structure of world trade and relates this to the "three track" trading system (bilateral, regional, and multilateral trade accords) as it emerges with the creation of the WTO. Preeg then offers recommendations for trade policy in the decade ahead and addresses the question of where the international trade system is or should be heading over the long term.

The following series of three reports resulted from a multi-year project, entitled the "Global Forum: Leadership 2000."

ASIA-PACIFIC COOPERATION: BUILDING FRAMEWORKS FOR PEACE AND PROSPERITY

The Global Forum 2000 involved over one hundred people from twenty countries. The working group on Asia-Pacific Cooperation, which included policy experts from government, business, and the academic communities in the United States and Japan, considered key global, regional, and bilateral issues affecting Asia-Pacific countries. The group focused on the need for traditional friends and allies to redefine their relations in light of new economic and security developments, as post-communist and socialist countries face uncertain transitions with implications for global and regional orders.

(Washington, DC: CSIS, 1992, 47 pp.)

THE FUTURE OF REGIONALISM

Building upon the combined experience of its corporate and academic members, the working group on Corporate Strategy and Regional Blocs considered the global, regional, and sub-national forces affecting the global economy and firms' corporate strategy. In April 1992, the group convened under the chairmanship of Marshall Cohen in Washington, DC. The members discussed the requirements of building strategic positions and the impact of regionalism and governments in shaping regional corporate strategies. This paper provides a starting point for developing a framework to explain the causes and consequences of regionalism.

(Washington, DC: CSIS, 1992, 26 pp.)

A STRATEGIC APPROACH TO GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL PARTNERSHIP AND
TWO VIEWS FROM THE BUSINESS COMMUNITY ON THE PROTECTION OF THE GLOBAL ENVIRONMENT

The working group on the Global Environment met three times in the spring of 1992, a dynamic and often contentious period in international environmental affairs as countries around the world gathered to prepare for the UN Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) to be held that June in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Under the co-chairmanship of Japan Diet member Kazuo Aichi and then US Senator Al Gore, the working group engaged in lively debate. This document provides commentary on a number of key issues relating to the protection of the global environment and argues that the United States and Japan should work together to develop a global environmental strategy underpinned by a more extensive partnership among these two nations and others.

BLOOD FEUDS: AIDS, BLOOD, AND THE POLITICS OF MEDICAL DISASTER

Eric A. Feldman and Ronald Bayer, eds.

A comparative perspective on the political, legal, and social struggles that emerged in response to the HIV contamination of blood supplies in eight industrialized countries. This compilation of twelve essays presents the experiences of the United States, Japan, France, Canada, Germany, Denmark, Italy, and Australia, and includes four articles that illuminate the cultural, institutional, and economic dimensions of the HIV/blood disaster. Bringing governance challenges to the forefront, the book details the responses of the eight nations to the first signs that AIDS might be transmitted through blood, early failed efforts to eliminate contamination, and the final implementation of measures to secure an uncontaminated blood supply. The authors also include information about the mobilization of hemophiliacs who challenged the state, the medical establishment, and their own caregivers in order to seek recompense and justice. A Japanese translation is forthcoming.

EXAMINING JAPAN'S SUCCESS IN INFANT MORTALITY REDUCTION

Stephanie Harrison

A report on an exchange project in which public health officials, and health policy experts from the southern United States traveled to Tokyo to meet with health care experts and government officials and visit health care facilities to discuss the reasons for Japan's success in the area of infant mortality reduction. This report summarizes the study tour, compares infant mortality reduction efforts in the United States and Japan, and concludes with "lessons learned" and policy recommendations for states that grapple with these complex problems.

(Atlanta, GA: The Council of State Governments, 1997, 28 pp.)

The following two reports resulted from a multi-year dialogue project on health care issues in Japan. The project aimed to educate western US state legislatures about Japan's health care system. It involved selecting a group of western state legislators to travel to Tokyo to meet with health care experts and government officials and to visit health care facilities to learn about the Japanese health care system.

BALANCING ACCESS, COST, AND QUALITY IN HEALTH CARE: OBSERVATIONS FROM JAPAN

An analysis of the aspects of the Japanese health care system that are relevant to US state-level policymakers. The report includes discussion on mechanisms for financing health care in the Japanese system, cost containment methods, and health care delivery systems.

(Lombard, IL: The Council of State Governments Midwestern Office, 1995, 34 pp.)

HEALTH CARE REFORM: LESSONS FROM JAPAN

ASIAN SECURITY PRACTICE: MATERIAL AND IDEATIONAL INFLUENCES

Muthiah Alagappa, ed.

An ethnographic study of sixteen Asian countries' conceptions of security to identify key characteristics of Asian security practice. Security experts from the region investigate each country's security concerns and the behavior of its central decision makers by asking what the countries seek to protect, from whom, and how their respective security policies have evolved. The book includes a review of the debate over defining security, a historical overview of international politics in Asia, and a description of the prominent security issues in each country. It also compares the various approaches that each country is taking to handle security concerns.

CLUB OF TOKYO (SPECIAL THEMATIC ISSUE) INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF WATER RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT VOL. 17, NO. 4
Asit K. Biswas and Kazuo Takahashi, eds.

A collection of papers that were presented at an international symposium in September 2000, organized by the Tokyo Club, by an international group of experts concerned with water resources. The symposium was based on the assumption that globalization relates to three different classifications of developing countries: (1) countries that are in the process of integrating with the world economy; (2) countries that have been left behind by world economic growth; and (3) countries that are a mixture of the first two classifications. The volume looks at water issues from several angles, including conflicts surrounding investment in water supply and liberalization of supply, supply and demand gaps between urban and rural areas, and distribution of water resources, as well as issues of water pollution and environmental protection. ### INDUSTRIALIZING KNOWLEDGE: UNIVERSITY-INDUSTRY LINKAGES IN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES

Lewis M. Branscomb, Fumio Kodama, and Richard Florida, eds.

A comparative analysis of the relationship between university research and technological innovation in the United States and Japan. Twenty-three essays by US and Japanese scholars discuss the mechanics of university-industry interactions and how policies encouraging such interactions can address regional and national needs. The authors argue that, in both countries, an equivalent degree of collaboration exists among faculty members and their colleagues in industry. They also suggest that the pace of technological change rather than government incentives drives universities to contribute to business growth. Finally, the book indicates that policies aimed at transforming economically depressed areas through the promotion of university-based ventures are difficult to implement when the environment for economic transformation is weak.

THE EVOLUTION OF CIVIL SOCIETY: FROM MEIJI TO HEISEI

Sheldon Garon

Examining state-society relations from the Meiji era to the late-twentieth century, this essay uncovers ample evidence of a vibrant public sphere, civil society, and rich social capital in Japan. Garon seeks to illustrate the existence of civil society throughout Japan's prewar and wartime past by demonstrating that journalism and publishing flourished, public debate was alive, and hundreds of thousands of people belonged to groups that advanced various demands. At the same time, many groups worked with officials as agents in state programs to manage the rest of society. After utilizing the concept of civil society for historical analysis, the author also explains how the current political system is being transformed by an infusion of new social forces.

(Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Program on US-Japan Relations, 2002, 12 pp.)

GLOBAL CITIZENS IN A BORDERLESS WORLD? STATES, INTERNATIONAL POLITICS, AND THE DELAYED APPEARANCE OF ENVIRONMENT ADVOCACY NGO'S IN JAPAN

Kim DoHyang Reimann

Appearing first in the West and spreading to other parts of the world, internationally active nongovernmental organizations (INGOs) promoting sustainable development and the environment have proliferated since the 1970s. This paper provides a comparative overview of environmental advocacy INGOs in Japan and other industrialized countries, articulates the political model for INGO formation, and shows how the political environment facing INGOs at both the domestic and international level explains these two patterns. Examples are taken from campaigns in Japan by environmental INGOs to reform foreign aid and multilateral development banks.

(Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Program on US-Japan Relations, 2002, 59 pp.)

KEEPING UP: MECHANISMS OF FIRMS RECONNAISSANCE AND INTRA-INDUSTRY LOOPS IN JAPAN

Michael A. Witt

As part of the monograph series, Witt takes a number of steps toward explaining how firms obtain private information about their business environment. While the business literature acknowledges the importance of such information for firms, we know very little about the way in which they actually acquire it. The paper argues that firms in different countries rely on distinct modes of data collection and proposes a general framework for predicting which modes are prevalent in which countries. The paper also presents evidence that Japanese firms keep informed about their business environment through the extensive use of "intra-industry loops," which are social networks connecting firms with other firms and non-firms in the same industry.

Robert Dujarric, ed.

A paper that examines the relationship between Korean reunification and international politics in Northeast Asia. It argues that a new order built solely around the major powers—be it a neo-bipolar system with the United States and Japan at one pole and China and Russia at the other, a concert of great powers, or a classical balance-of-power system—will negatively affect the likelihood of reunification and be inadequate to meet the challenges associated with the process and consequences. Instead, the paper postulates that a new multilateral system of cooperative security in the region would be the more desirable form of regional order, as it would elastically react to any contingencies before, during, and after reunification.

THE IMPLICATIONS FOR JAPANESE DEREGULATION OF U.S. REGULATORY REFORM (NIHON NI OKERU KISEI KANWA O DOU SUSUMERU BEKI KA?)

The results of a research project that analyzed deregulation in the United States during the late 1970s and 1980s, using the process of change undertaken during that period as a point of reference for assessing the obstacles that exist within the Japanese political system. This publication includes a summary of the political conditions in both countries, descriptions of research methodologies, and policy recommendations for Japanese deregulation.

ASIAN TRANSITIONAL ECONOMIES: CHALLENGES AND PROSPECTS FOR REFORM AND TRANSFORMATION (AJIA NI OKERU SHIJO KEIZAI E NO IKO MONDAI: KAIKAKU E NO CHOSEN TO TENBO)

Seiji Naya and Joseph Tan, eds.

The results of a study, conducted in collaboration with the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, that examined the process of transition from socialist, centrally planned economies to market-driven economies in Vietnam, Laos, Mongolia, and Myanmar. This volume covers topics such as the role of foreign direct investment in the development of these economies and the impact of the East Asian economic “miracle” on the transition process. Also included are case studies in the four countries that analyze the progress made and problems facing each country.

STRENGTHENING THE UNITED NATIONS FOR PEACE AND ENVIRONMENT

(KOKUREN KYOKA NI KANSURU TOKYO KAIGI: HEIWA TO KANKYO)

Tatsuo Kunugi, ed.

The summary of a symposium, convened in Tokyo in January 1993, on the topic of “Strengthening the United Nations: Peace and the Environment.” Topics dealt with at the symposium included then UN Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali’s proposal on Issues for Peace and Agenda 21, which was adopted at the Earth Summit in Rio. Since the end of the Cold War, new expectations for the United Nations have grown, and this report illustrates an active discussion aimed at increasing citizen participation in international organizations.

BUILDING AN ASIA-PACIFIC COMMUNITY: DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION WITHIN APEC

Andrew Elek, ed.

A report on research that was undertaken for a series of conferences between September 1995 and December 1996. Experts on the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation Forum (APEC)—established in 1989 to encourage trade and investment liberalization and to shrink the large economic development gap around the world through economic and technological cooperation, as acknowledged at the Bogor Conference in 1994—gathered to further investigate a framework for concrete economic and technological cooperation and develop strategies to create a system for cooperation and aid that goes beyond the traditional patron-client relationship.

UNITED STATES–JAPAN RELATIONS AND INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTIONS AFTER THE COLD WAR (REISENGO NO NICHIBEI KANKEI: KOKUSAI SEIDO NO SEIJI KEIZAI GAKU)

Peter Gourevitch, Takashi Inoguchi, and Courtney Purrington, eds.

The results of a research project on the US–Japan relationship and international institutions in the Asia-Pacific Region. This volume addresses how Japan and the United States can create a mechanism to facilitate coordinated action in areas that extend beyond the bilateral relationship. Paper topics include the creation of a framework to ensure security in the Asia-Pacific region, the maintenance and strengthening of free trade, governmental development assistance, and United Nations peacekeeping and peacemaking operations. The report also offers country perspectives on the role of the US–Japan relationship in multilateral organizations such as ASEAN and APEC.

Japan Association of Environment and Society for the 21st Century

JUNKAN SOCIETY: THE VISION AND THE PATH (JYUNKAN SHAKAI: BIJON TO MICHISUJI)

Junkan Society Research Team, eds.

A report that offers recommendations for the United States and Japan in becoming "recycling societies." As two of the largest economies in the world, the United States and Japan share a responsibility to deal with continuing problems of poverty, of which environmental problems are at the core. Arguing that it is urgent that both countries change their over-producing and over-consuming socio-economic system, this report presents theoretical and practical advice for creating recycling societies or sustainable societies by addressing concrete issues of energy, recycling, consumer lifestyles, and business.

AGING ISSUES IN THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN

Seiritsu Ogura, Toshiaki Tachibanaki, and David A. Wise, eds.

This volume, the third in the joint series from the Japan Center for Economic Research and National Bureau of Economic Research, explores the economic consequences of the graying society in Japan and the United States. The four themes explored include incentives for early retirement; savings, wealth, and asset allocation over the life cycle; health care and health care reform; and population projections. Considering the global importance of the Japanese and US economies, these essays will shed new light on the complex correlations between aging and economic behavior.

IN ASIA, VOL. 16

Tadashi Yamamoto and Charles E. Morrison, eds.

Papers prepared as background material for the Shimoda '94 Conference, a policy research and dialogue program begun in 1993. The issues presented in these background papers fall within four broad thematic areas of key concern to Japan in reshaping policies toward the United States and the Asia-Pacific region. The first and underlying theme involves a redefinition of Japan's fundamental interests and the way it presents itself to the world. The second and third are the evolution of its regional economic posture and its role in regional security. Lastly, the papers discuss Japan's contributions in addressing a set of global issues that have emerged as a critical part of the international agenda in the post-Cold War era.

ASIA-PACIFIC AND THE AMERICAS:
RECONCILING REGIONAL AND GLOBAL ECONOMIC INTERESTS

Policy recommendations that emerged from the research project on "Regionalism in the Global Economy," conducted in collaboration with the University of California, San Diego. The report brings attention to the impact of increasing regional economic arrangements on the global free market system. Even as cooperation among the institutions in the Asia-Pacific region—including the North American Free Trade Agreement, the ASEAN Free Trade Area, and the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation Forum—increases, it has become apparent that Asian and American views on regionalism differ. In order to harmonize these views and facilitate effective regional cooperation, this volume seeks to explain the Millennium Round of the GATT Uruguay Round and the emergence of regionalism. It contains recommendations for APEC and for the United States.

BUILDING THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM OF
THE 21ST CENTURY: AN AGENDA FOR JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES

A final report of a US-Japan symposium convened in the United States in July 1998. Financial experts and practitioners from the United States and Japan came together for discussions within the context of the financial crisis that had rocked Asian countries the year before, tremors in international financial mechanisms, and Japan's poor credit problems. The participants discussed three concrete topics: (1) prescriptions for avoiding the factors that led to Asia's financial crisis; (2) creation of international financial regulatory mechanisms and the problems surrounding those standards; and (3) Japan's poor credit problems, the impact of the financial "big bang," and banking reform.

DEMOCRACY IN EAST ASIA

A report on a March 1996 international conference sponsored by JIIA, the International Forum for Democratic Studies in the United States, and the Thai Public Policy Research Center. The report demonstrates the diversity of opinions among the experts from Japan, the United States, and other parts of Asia that attended the conference. Participants noted that not only is there more diversity in terms of political systems in Asia than in other regions, but it is also a region where recent economic growth has led to an expectation of more democratization.

(Washington, DC: International Forum for Democratic Studies, 1996, 41 pp.)

ENHANCING SECURITY IN SOUTHEAST ASIA (JIIA PAPER NO. 5)

A report based on an April 1993 conference that brought together scholars from Japan, the United States, Australia, China, Korea, and ASEAN. The first section gives an overview of the national security issues in Southeast Asia. The second section addresses the changing role of large countries outside of Southeast Asia. The third section deals with mechanisms and processes for dealing with regional conflicts. The fourth section discusses improvements in regional security in Southeast Asia. The final section provides a discussion from two angles, one addressing the cultural and geographic characteristics of the region and the other addressing more universal security issues. This volume offers a concise explanation of the current situation and the future outlook for security in a region that has changed dramatically as a result of the end of the Cold War and economic growth.

THE PROSPECTS OF SECURITY COOPERATION IN ASIA (JIIA PAPER NO. 7)

A collection of papers that were presented by US and Japanese security experts at the Institute's US-Japan dialogue forum in June 1992. The report is divided into five parts. The first four parts address traditional security issues: a framework for regional security cooperation, the post-Cold War environment, the future of the US-Japan security alliance, and the China issue and Asian security. The final section deals with the nonmilitary issue of movement toward democracy and market economies in the region. The book is written from a long-term point of view, focusing on areas in which the United States and Japan can work together toward providing security in the region.

U.S.-JAPAN POLICY DIALOGUE ON CHINA: ECONOMIC ISSUES

This publication is a result of the session on economic reform and regional development in China. The participants argued that the most challenging aspect of the economic transformation of socialist economies is the development of markets for the allocation of capital, labor, and output. The report also emphasizes the importance of external factors such as foreign trade, foreign direct investment, and the importation of foreign technology in China's economic development.

A report on a symposium organized in October 2001 by the Japanese Society for Tax Law, based on recognition of those issues. It contains lectures, reports and panel discussions by Japanese, American, and German scholars discussing such issues as union organization and taxation of special interest foundations. After World War II, as Japan developed more vigorous economic relations with the United States, adjustments were made in income tax systems for businesses. In more recent years, as economic activity and asset movement have increased, and businesses active in Japan have taken various forms, it has become clear that there is a need to rethink the income tax system. For that reason, it has become necessary to compare and adjust income tax laws in the United States, Japan, and Europe.

RURAL HEALTH CARE IN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES: SHARED CHALLENGES AND SOLUTIONS (NICHIBEI NO HEKICHI IRYO KYOTSU NO KADAI TO TAISAKU)

A bilingual compilation of the Mansfield Center's summary and conclusions from its two conferences in Hokkaido and Montana. The conferences provided an opportunity for policy-makers and practitioners in rural areas to express their perspective on access to health care. Japan and the United States have similar problems regarding access to health care in remote, rural areas and similar approaches for resolving these problems. Additionally, the book includes summary chapters on topics such as alternative health care systems, definitions of "rural," medical education, technology, and the role of government. These new perspectives offer insight on grassroots initiatives and their potential to motivate national legislation and public awareness.

JAPAN IN THE POSTHEGEMONIC WORLD

Tsuneo Akaha and Frank Langdon, eds.

A book about Japan's foreign policy that examines the requirements of post-hegemonic leadership and considers Japan's ability to meet challenges in the political, security, and economic spheres. Authors discuss the political economy as well as Japan's willingness and capability to take on a stronger international role. Authors also isolate the opportunities and obstacles at home and abroad that are shaping the ways in which Japan defines and pursues its global interests.

National Academy of Public Administration, National Institute for Research Advancement, and the University of North Carolina

The following three books are the result of a multi-year dialogue project on issues concerning governance in the Asia-Pacific, which brought together experts on these issues from several Pacific Rim countries.

THE CHALLENGE TO NEW GOVERNANCE IN THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY: ACHIEVING EFFECTIVE CENTRAL-LOCAL RELATIONS

A compilation of twenty-eight essays by Japanese, Australian, Korean, Chinese, and US scholars. The book addresses issues such as governance capacities of governmental and non-governmental institutions, the changing role of public administration, governance policy and implementation on economic development and environmental protection, and future prospects for effective governance.

(Tokyo, Japan: National Institute for Research Advancement, 1999, 585 pp.) ISBN: 4-7955-8412-5

FUTURE CHALLENGES OF LOCAL AUTONOMY IN JAPAN, KOREA, AND THE UNITED STATES: SHARED RESPONSIBILITIES BETWEEN NATIONAL AND SUB-NATIONAL GOVERNMENTS

Fukashi Horie and Masaru Nishio, eds.

A volume that addresses issues of future local autonomy and the role of central and local governments, focusing on Japan, the United States, and Korea. Topics include local governance in an intergovernmental context, the reform of administration and fiscal policy, administrative innovation and local problem solving, and prospects for local autonomy in the twenty-first century.

(Tokyo, Japan: National Institute for Research Advancement, 1997, 493 pp.) ISBN: 4-7955-6411-6

GLOBALIZATION & DECENTRALIZATION: INSTITUTIONAL CONTEXTS, POLICY ISSUES, AND INTERGOVERNMENTAL RELATIONS IN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES

Jong S. Jun and Deil S. Wright, eds.

A compilation of twenty essays written by leading Japanese and US scholars on parallel public policy issues, institutional patterns, and intergovernmental relations in Japan and the United States. The essays examine emerging strategies for dealing with environmental concerns, urban problems, infrastructure investments, financial policies, and human services issues.

National Bureau of Economic Research

REGIONAL AND GLOBAL CAPITAL FLOWS: MACROECONOMIC CAUSES AND CONSEQUENCES

Takatoshi Ito and Anne O. Krueger, eds.

In light of the enormous growth in the volume of capital flows over the past decade, this book is a compilation of papers that address different types of capital flows—bank lending, direct foreign investment—and examines the implications for economic performance. These papers examine the impact of foreign direct investment on host and recipient countries, the specific effects on economic growth, and the differences between foreign-owned (or joint venture) firms and local firms. By concentrating on macroeconomic issues concerning the flow of private capital to and from the East Asian economies during the crises of 1997, the commentary aims to help policymakers avoid such crises in the future.

The National Security Archive

JAPAN-UNITED STATES SYMPOSIUM: THE INTERNATIONALIZATION OF JAPAN AND OPEN GOVERNMENT

Robert A. Wampler

A conference report on the subject of public access to government information. Leading American and Japanese scholars convened at the United Nations University in Tokyo in June 1995 to discuss the history of public access to government information in the United States; the manner in which the public and scholars make use of access to official records in the United States for research and study; and the problems surrounding efforts to institute a similar system of official record keeping, declassification, and public access to government documents in Japan.

(Washington, DC: National Security Archive, 1995, 16 pp.)

The Operations Research Society of Japan

JAPAN-US SYMPOSIUM ON THE FUTURE OF THE PROTECTION OF SOFTWARE AND ALGORITHMS—A DIALOGUE BETWEEN THE ENGINEERING AND LEGAL COMMUNITY

A compilation of papers written by US and Japanese members of the engineering and law communities about issues concerning the protection of software. The publication is the result of a March 1995 symposium held in Yokohama. It includes summaries of keynote speeches, panel discussions, and tutorials held at this two-day event.

TRILATERAL RELATIONS AMONG THE UNITED STATES, JAPAN, AND CHINA

Ralph A. Cossa and Jane Skanderup

A conference report about cooperation among the United States, China, and Japan on security in East Asia. Topics include the three sets of bilateral relations and each nation's broader role in Asia, the economic and security dimensions of the three-way relationship, and common goals and objectives that can be used to build trilateral cooperation.

(Honolulu, HI: Pacific Forum Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1998, 89 pp.)

Philippine American Foundation

The following two reports contain the results of a three-year dialogue project on women's workplace issues in the United States, the Philippines, and Japan. They both feature papers written by US, Filipino, and Japanese women leaders. The workshop findings offer methods for more effective policy-making and implementation on both a national and global level. The reports aim to explain women's workplace issues to policymakers and women leaders in all three countries.

RESTRUCTURING THE US-JAPAN ALLIANCE: TOWARD A MORE EQUAL PARTNERSHIP

Ralph A. Cossa, ed.

A combination of commentary and analysis addressing the overall East Asian geopolitical environment. The essays aim to place the US-Japan alliance in its proper strategic context, better define its current and future role, and predict potential new challenges to the alliance and Japanese roles and missions to ensure a more balanced partnership for the twenty-first century.

(Washington, DC: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1997, 153 pp.)

ISBN: 0-89206-294-0

US-JAPAN COLLABORATION IN ADVANCED TECHNOLOGIES: FUTURE ROLE IN ASIA

A series of research papers that present strategies for technological development aimed at fostering an industrial partnership among the United States, Japan, and the rest of Asia to ensure mutual prosperity in the coming century. Based on seminars attended by Americans and Japanese from various industries, the book discusses areas of advanced technology, such as computers, nanotechnology, biotechnology, and telecommunications.

(Tokyo, Japan: The Policy Study Group, 1997, 132 pp.)

Princeton University

JAPAN AND RUSSIA: THE TORTUOUS PATH TO NORMALIZATION, 1949-1999

Gilbert Rozman, ed.

In this collection, experts from Japan, Russia, and the United States explore the chronology of bilateral relations between Japan and Russia. Drawing on personal experiences as officials and consultants, the authors reflect on opportunities for a breakthrough that were lost in the 1990s when normalization negotiations were underway. This volume elaborates on how Tokyo and Moscow differed in their assessments and how the logic of decision making affected the course of negotiations. Coverage of the preceding four decades expertly sets the background. Comparisons shed light on domestic factors behind these relations and on the great power context in which they operate.

(New York, NY: St. Martin's Press, 2000, 389 pp.)
ISBN: 0-312-2287-5

REDISCOVERING RUSSIA IN ASIA: SIBERIA AND THE RUSSIAN FAR EAST

Stephen Kotkin and David Wolff, eds.

A volume of twenty papers by scholars from the United States, Russia, Japan, and Korea that provide both historical overviews and a contemporary analysis of the Russian Far East from various disciplinary perspectives. The volume is based on an international conference held at Princeton University in December 1993.

(Armonk, NY: M.E. Sharpe, Inc., 1995, 356 pp.)
ISBN: 1-56324-547-7

REFOCUSING U.S. TECHNOLOGY POLICY: LESSONS FROM JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES

William W. Grimes

A study that argues for a fundamental refocusing of US technology policy, based on a reevaluation of technological development and of the needs of the US economy. The goal of this refocused policy is to strengthen the economy, not to emphasize defense and other missions inherited from the Cold War years. The analysis begins with a critique of traditional views of technological development while examining the structural factors in the US political economy that stand in the way of effective commercial

JAPAN AND BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE

Michael D. Swaine, Rachel M. Swanger, and Takashi Kawagami

A book that explores both the benefits and potential problems of deploying a ballistic missile defense (BMD) system in Japan. Spurred by a perceived growing ballistic missile threat from within the Asia-Pacific region and requests from the United States to support research and development on components of a missile defense system, the Japanese government made a series of initial decisions in late 1998 and early 1999 to move forward with collaborative research and development with the United States on BMD. This book examines the main policies and actions undertaken thus far by Japan in the area of BMD, discusses several future milestones and identifies the major Japanese individuals and organizations influencing future decisions on BMD. It also assesses how key Japanese players address such issues as alliance maintenance, cost, feasibility, commercial incentives, and Chinese behavior. A companion Japanese summary (Nihongo yoyakuban) of the publication is also available.

Regional Planning Association

US-JAPAN METROPOLITAN PLANNING EXCHANGE: REPORT OF THE 1994 MEETING

Akihiko Tani, ed.

A conference report that describes ways to maintain and expand the residential population in different wards, means of restoring town character and natural resources in the face of pressure for new residential and resort development, and methods to diversify cities economically. The volume also includes a summary of three case studies conducted in Tokyo, Zushi, and Nagoya.

Research Institute for Peace and Security

NEW FRONTIERS FOR U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY RELATIONS (NICHIBEI ANZEN HOSHO KANKEI NO ARATANA FURONTIA)

A volume that presents the results of a joint research project on the US-Japan alliance in the twenty-first century. In the post-Cold War period, the US-Japan alliance has been faced with major changes in the international environment, including the Gulf War, the collapse of the Soviet Union, the Asian financial crisis, and the terrorist attacks in the United States, urging the two countries to establish broader security cooperation. In particular, it has become evident that the threats of recent years—ethnic conflict, failed states, and terrorism—require medium-term strategies and systems for cooperation in a variety of fields. This report raises issues surrounding the new possibilities for the US-Japan alliance.

(Tokyo, Japan: Research Institute for Peace and Security, 2002, 31 pp.)

RESHAPING THE US-JAPAN ALLIANCE: FROM CONTAINMENT TO REGIONAL STABILITY (NICHIBEI DOMEI NO ATARASHII YAKUWARI: FUJIKOME KARA CHIIKI ANTEI E)

A final report of a joint research project, carried out by the Research Institute for Peace and Security and the City University of New York's Ralph Bunche Institute on the United Nations, on the topic of Revitalizing the US-Japan Alliance. This project created a discussion about whether the alliance, which has proven successful in the past, is still appropriate in the post-Cold War era, particularly in its role of maintaining regional stability. The discussion led to the acknowledgment of the importance of beginning with basic domestic support for the alliance in order to maintain the alliance's internal health and then moving on to support for regional trust building and dialogue.

PUBLIC OPINION IN AMERICA AND JAPAN: HOW WE SEE EACH OTHER AND OURSELVES

Everett Carl Ladd and Karlyn H. Bowman

A review of contemporary public opinion data on the US-Japan relationship. The authors examine US and Japanese public perceptions of the economic and security relationship; attitudes toward family, work and leisure, and women's roles; and satisfaction with democracy.

(Washington, DC: American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, 1996, 161 pp.)
ISBN: 0-8447-7057-4

THE ROPER CENTER GUIDE TO PUBLIC OPINION IN JAPAN

A guide to the Roper Center's collection of over 1,000 reports, which contain full-question text and responses from surveys conducted in Japan from the 1980s through 1995. These studies, conducted by major polling agencies in Japan, report more than 20,000 survey questions and responses. In addition, nearly 12,000 individual survey questions have been translated into English. The guide also includes an annotated listing of Japanese public opinion survey holdings at the Roper Center, as well as an annotated listing of Japanese public opinion survey data sets in the library at the Roper Center. The guide can also be found on the Internet at <www.ropercenter.uconn.edu>.

AMERICA'S ALLIANCES WITH JAPAN AND KOREA IN A CHANGING NORTHEAST ASIA

A series of over thirty-five discussion papers based on a three-year research project on US-Japan and US-Korea security alliances. These papers, written by scholars from the United States, Japan, Korea, China, and elsewhere, address issues such as the historical origins and legacies of East Asian countries and the changing economic and political circumstances of the region. They also discuss the external environment of East Asia, specifically the possibilities of Korean unification and China's rise as both a regional and world power. The entire series will be published as a two-book set. All the papers can be obtained through Stanford's Asia/Pacific Research Center.

EAST ASIA AND THE INTERNATIONAL SYSTEM: REPORT OF A SPECIAL STUDY GROUP (HIGASHI AJIA TO KOKUSAI SHISUTEMU)

Charles E. Morrison, ed.

A report on the Trilateral Commission's special study group on East Asian economic and security concerns and the international system. Recognizing the rapid economic growth in East Asia and the developing roles of countries in the region, this volume contains four reports on East Asia's economic integration and regional order. The 1997 Asian currency crisis was an important turning point in recognition of the importance of rethinking the regional order and its relationship to the international system. The reports in this volume acknowledge such changes and make active policy recommendations.

OUR COMMON SHORES & OUR COMMON CHALLENGE: ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION OF THE PACIFIC: PROCEEDINGS OF THE FOURTH INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM OF THE CONFERENCE OF ASIAN AND PAN-PACIFIC UNIVERSITY PRESIDENTS

David G. Shaw, ed.

Results of meetings held during the Fourth International Symposium of the Conference of Asian and Pan-Pacific University Presidents. These proceedings address the serious degradation of the Pacific Ocean's waters and coastal areas. The symposium brought together an international group of intellectual leaders to address the issues vital to maintaining the sustainability of the marine environment of the Pacific Ocean and its coast. Throughout the book, the participants consider the possible environmental consequences of current trends in human activities and discuss actions that scholars can take to promote sustainable use of the Pacific environment for the mutual and equitable benefit of present and future generations.

WINNING IN ASIA, EUROPEAN STYLE: MARKET AND NONMARKET STRATEGIES FOR SUCCESS

Vinod K. Aggarwal, ed.

A collection of papers focused on understanding the market and nonmarket strategies employed by European firms, both before and after the financial crisis, to boost their share of the Asian market. Included are original case studies of the air transport, automobile, software, and finance sectors which demonstrate that an integrated approach synthesizing both strategies enables firms to respond to and benefit from a constantly changing political-economic-social environment. In addition to an innovative theoretical framework to analyze strategy, several chapters focus on investment trends in Asia, along with lobbying in both Asia and the European Union.

The following three publications are the result of a project that investigated the ways in which foreign direct investment by multinational companies based in the United States, Japan, and Europe affects the acquisition and diffusion of technology by less developed countries in East Asia. The study focused on competition and cooperation in the development and application of advanced technologies in two industries: motor vehicles and parts, and electronics.

CARRIERS OF REGIONALIZATION: THE EAST ASIAN PRODUCTION NETWORKS OF JAPANESE ELECTRONICS FIRMS

Dieter Ernst

A working paper that focuses on the extension of Japanese electronics production in East Asia, analyzing why the regional production networks that have resulted from this extension are now under pressure to open and why they are being forced to further their integration with some of the host country economies. Ernst concludes with a brief assessment of whether Japanese regional production networks will become more open in the future.

(Berkeley, CA: University of California, Berkeley, 1994, 57 pp.)

JAPAN INVESTMENT IN ASIA: INTERNATIONAL PRODUCTION STRATEGIES IN A RAPIDLY CHANGING WORLD

Eileen Doherty, ed.

A collection of studies and comments on the obstacles facing Japanese firms as they attempt to adapt to new economic challenges in the region. The papers were presented at a Berkeley roundtable conference held in September 1994 and address issues such as the influence of cross-national production activities of Japanese, US, European, and non-Japanese Asian firms on regional trade investment flows and domestic investment, production, and employment outcomes.

ASSESSING APEC'S PROGRESS: TRADE, ECOTECH & INSTITUTIONS

Richard E. Feinberg and Ye Zhao, eds.

A book that is the product of the APEC International Assessment Network (APIAN), a collaborative, independent project among participating APEC Study Centers to track and assess the design and execution of key APEC initiatives. Scholars at APEC Study Centers from thirteen APEC member economies undertook detailed studies of such central issues as trade in services, investment policy, human resource development, food and agriculture, energy, and financial stability. The findings note shortcomings in each of the critical areas of trade and investment liberalization, economic and technical cooperation, and institutional structure, and offers remedial policy recommendations to improve APEC's future performance.

US AND JAPANESE NONPROLIFERATION EXPORT CONTROLS

Gary K. Bertsch, Richard T. Cupitt, and Takehiko Yamamoto, eds.

The results of a three-year research project aimed at developing a series of US-Japan non-proliferation export control policy recommendations on US and Japanese participation in multi-lateral export control regimes. Through this project, conducted in collaboration with the Institute for International Policy Studies and Waseda University, a group of researchers from the United States and Japan produced papers on a range of export control issues. Topics covered include historical analyses of US and Japanese export control policy; export controls and non-proliferation concerns regarding China, North and South Korea, and Russia; specific industry concerns about export controls; and the prospects for future US-Japan cooperation.

RELUCTANT CHAMPIONS: U.S. PRESIDENTIAL POLICY AND STRATEGIC EXPORT CONTROLS

Richard T. Cupitt

This book, based in part on the results of a research grant to the University of Georgia's Center for International Trade and Security, explores how and why the United States came to adopt its export policies by examining the administrations of four presidents: Truman, Eisenhower, Bush, and Clinton. Controls on the export of military and dual-use items were fundamental to international efforts to constrain Soviet military capabilities during the Cold War. It concludes by comparing the roles of policy communities and the influence of political entrepreneurs in shaping presidential policy, the need to make presidential export control policy conform to the central rationales of an administration's grand strategy, and the influence of domestic interests opposing export controls.

CORPORATE EFFECTIVENESS AND HUMAN RESOURCE PRACTICES: INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS

A report from a conference that enabled Japanese and American practitioners and academics to come together to learn how human resource practices might contribute to positive outcomes for both firms and employees in America and Japan. The conference focused on uniting the study of human resource and industrial relations issues while providing business professionals a unique learning opportunity. Some of the main themes throughout the conference included human resource practices and organizational effectiveness, cost effective training and development, and employee financial participation practices.

BEYOND THE FRAMEWORK TALKS: BUILDING A MATURE US-JAPAN RELATIONSHIP

I.M. Destler and Hideo Sato, eds.

A report on a bi-national study that explored the domestic roots of issues between the United States and Japan. The report concludes that if the Japanese emulate American-style openness and Americans adopt Japanese-style fiscal responsibility and increased industrial productivity, the two countries will be able to ameliorate US-Japan trade conflicts.

(College Park, MD: Center for Strategic and International Studies, University of Maryland, 1994, 38 pp.)

The following seven papers are the result of a University of Maryland and University of Tsukuba collaborative research project on the US-Japan relationship.

FISCAL EXTERNALITIES IN US AND JAPANESE BUDGET POLICIES

Allen Shick; I. M. Destler and Hideo Sato, eds.

A paper that focuses on how changes in economic circumstances have been accompanied by changes in budget policy in Japan and the United States. It also offers comparisons of the budgetary practices of the two countries and analyzes the extent to which divergence in budget policy can be explained by political factors such as party and group activity. Finally, authors reflect on how recent political and economic developments might influence future budget practices in the United States and Japan.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, Maryland, 1996, 57 pp.)

HAS CONFLICT PASSED ITS PRIME? JAPANESE AND AMERICAN APPROACHES TO TRADE AND ECONOMIC POLICY

I. M. Destler

A paper that explains the sharp increase in US-Japan tensions over trade and economic issues between the early 1970s and the mid-1990s. Destler explains that this change in relations resulted from a shift in political agenda from US-market issues to Japanese-market issues. Faced with increased Japanese production and trade, the United States chose to demand market liberalization across the Pacific, but constant pressure resulted in a slow response and fueled Japanese resentment. Destler argues, however, that the tensions will diminish if Japan deregulates its economy and China continues to replace Japan as the focus of US trade policy.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, University of Maryland, 1997, 35 pp.)

INTEREST GROUP STRUCTURE AND REGIME CHANGE IN JAPAN

Yutaka Tsujinaka

The sixth in a series of Maryland-Tsukuba Papers on US-Japan relations. The author argues that irreversible changes have occurred in Japan's interest group structure. While causality is difficult to establish, data from his study indicates an ongoing transformation of the Japanese political system toward greater pluralism and accountability. With growing participation of civic groups, reform-minded business and labor organizations, and transnational foundations, he concludes that Japan should assume a more active and independent role in the international order.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, University of Maryland, 1996, 69 pp.)

THE PARTICIPATION OF JAPANESE MILITARY FORCES IN UN PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS

Milton Leitenberg; I. M. Destler and Hideo Sato, eds.

A paper that addresses Japanese participation in United Nations (UN) peacekeeping operations. Leitenberg states that Japanese participation has been constrained by the country's enduring reluctance to engage in military activity. He also asserts that Asian nations are reluctant to welcome Japanese military participation due to Japan's failure to come to terms with its World War II atrocities and the lack of an integrated Asian military organization like NATO. Finally, Leitenberg states that encouraging Japan's integration into UN peacekeeping activities is more conducive to the continued peaceful evolution of Japan's role in the world than having Japan remain outside that structure.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, University of Maryland, 1996, 65 pp.)

POLICY CAUSES OF JAPAN—US ECONOMIC CONFLICT

Kenichi Ohno; I. M. Destler and Hideo Sato, eds.

A paper that documents the rise in Japanese industrial productivity relative to the United States and argues that policies that have contributed to this outcome are no longer appropriate for the advanced industrial country that Japan has become. The author recommends that Japan replace heavy-handed regulation and protection with open markets and free trade and that the United States restore fiscal discipline and de-emphasize consumption in favor of productivity-enhancing investment.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, Maryland, 1996, 43 pp.)

PROSPECTS FOR GLOBAL LEADERSHIP SHARING: THE ECONOMIC DIMENSION

Hideo Sato

A paper that assesses how the United States and Japan have faced the challenges of shared leadership on economic policy. Sato examines each country's record on foreign aid, promotion of democracy, multilateral and regional trade policy, and bilateral relations.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, University of Maryland, 1996, 35 pp.)

PROSPECTS FOR GLOBAL LEADERSHIP SHARING: THE SECURITY DIMENSION

Ivo H. Daalder

The fourth in a series of Maryland-Tsukuba Papers on US-Japan relations. The author argues that shared leadership in economic affairs requires US leadership in security affairs, focusing on both the changes in the international system during the post-Cold War era and the domestic demands pressing down upon Washington and Tokyo. This paper questions the ability of political leaders in the United States and Japan to generate public and political support for joint cooperation on security affairs and shows how Japanese and American political behavior is influenced by domestic constraints.

(College Park, MD: Center for International and Security Studies, University of Maryland, 1996, 45 pp.)

ORGANIZATIONAL LEARNING AND INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION

William Lazonick

A test of the author's "skill-base hypothesis" through an analysis of US-Japanese industrial competition during the 1980s and 1990s. The hypothesis contends that international competition and technology have had an impact on income distribution. It also states that firms that invest in broad and deep skill bases can generate organizational learning, thereby contributing to innovation and, in turn, creating sustainable prosperity. Topics addressed include organizational integration, organizational learning, technology, and international competition.

the actual dynamics of their close economic links. The authors believe the potential for improvement should be incorporated into the formal government-to-government negotiations that are currently taking place within the global context: multilaterally in the World Trade Organization (WTO), regionally in the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum, and bilaterally with the administration of national trade laws and the negotiation of free trade agreements. The review of US-Japan bilateral relations includes analysis of the major actions and positions taken by the two nations in the context of their national trade laws and policies, methods of implementing their trade policies, the effects of bilateral trade agreements, and the interplay of legal decisions reached in WTO actions with measures undertaken by the two nations.

COMPETITION POLICY IN THE GLOBAL TRADING SYSTEM

Clifford A. Jones and Mitsuo Matsushita, eds.

A compilation of articles presenting comparative perspectives on bilateral and trilateral issues among the European Union, Japan, and the United States on international development of national antitrust laws. While the role of antitrust in international trade has been recognized since the original Havana charter, it has yet to be incorporated into international agreements such as the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) or its successor, the World Trade Organization (WTO). The WTO Millennium Round of trade negotiations, however, has brought this concept to the forefront. Issues addressed include the foundations of international antitrust enforcement, and bilateral cooperation, as well as whether and how international antitrust rules should be incorporated into the global trading system.

A project report summarizing the goals and findings of fifteen Japanese groups that traveled around the United States to visit with the general public in September 2001, as part of a project commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the San Francisco Peace Treaty (A50). While the primary goal of the project was to spread knowledge about contemporary Japan and facilitate discussion between Japan experts and the general US public on topics of common concern, the journeys became unexpectedly poignant as the events of September 11 occurred during the project, causing the participants to reflect once again on the respective roles of, and the relationship between, the United States in Japan. The report includes sections on the preparation and implementation stages and on post-program reflections. A list of participants and the schedules of each team are also included.

MAKIKO'S NEW WORLD: ACTIVITIES FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASSROOM, VIDEO AND TEACHER'S GUIDE

Teacher's Guide by Gary Mukai

A film offering US high school students a unique glimpse into the latter part of the Meiji period (1868–1912) in Japan through the experiences of one woman, Makiko. Students learn about the period by witnessing Makiko's life as reconstructed from her diary. The accompanying teacher's guide provides handouts with background information on the period and suggests activities for students to learn more about Japanese culture and history. The film and teacher's guide together help students to analyze the causes of the Meiji restoration, study the goals and policies of the Meiji state and their impact on Japan's modernization, and assess the impact of Western ideas on Japan in the Meiji period.

Japan Model United Nations Society, Kansai Model United Nations

The following are a series of reports by the members of the Japanese delegations sent to participate in the National Model United Nations (UN) Conferences, which are held annually in New York City. Students from around the world gather each year at this conference to discuss and deepen their understanding of global issues in a simulated UN meeting. Each year, a Japanese delegation of university students takes part in a joint preparatory session with students from the United States. Reports contain summaries of all conference activities, accounts from members of the Japanese delegation, and statements by UN staff members who conducted briefings. The Japanese participants' comments about the exchange program reveal how the conference increased their awareness of current problems affecting the international community.

Japan Networkers' Conference

SHAPING NETWORKING INTO A REALITY: SEEKING A NEW RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN INDIVIDUALS AND SOCIETY (DAI 2 KAI NIHON NETTOWAAKAAZU FORAMU HOKOKUSHO: NETTOWAAKINGU O KATACHI NI)

A report on a series of forums conducted throughout Japan, which sought to strengthen nonprofit organizations and establish a foundation for grassroots activities in Japan. Forums were held in Kawasaki, Osaka, and Nagoya to examine successful nonprofit organizations in the United States and to introduce models for nonprofit organization management, as well as for partnerships between nonprofit organizations and corporations. More than 800 people participated in the forums. The report includes transcripts of presentations given by nonprofit professionals from both the United States and Japan. The report addresses topics of increasing importance, such as the current status of public interest corporation systems in Japan, the significance and management of NPO support systems in the United States, and the cultivation of partnerships with corporations.

FROM BENTO TO MIXED PLATE: AMERICANS OF JAPANESE ANCESTRY IN MULTICULTURAL HAWAII: EDUCATIONAL MATERIALS

A curriculum and resource kit for K-12 teachers to accompany the museum's exhibition, "From Bento to Mixed Plate: Americans of Japanese Ancestry in Multicultural Hawai'i." The kit provides teachers with instructional tools to explore the social, political, and economic issues related to the exhibition through lesson plans, a directory of teaching resources, and appendices containing a glossary and the national standards for social studies. The activities presented in the materials can be used in the classroom as preparation for or follow-up to an exhibition visit, or as supplementary curriculum materials for regular classroom use.

JAPANESE AMERICAN CURRICULUM FRAMEWORK

A K-12 curriculum framework designed by the museum staff and education specialists to encourage the inclusion of Japanese American issues in social studies and language arts courses. Teachers can use the framework to help students recognize the significance of the Japanese American experience and its place in American history. The curriculum framework explores issues related to peoples' origins, citizenship, civil rights, race, community, and culture. Emphasis is placed on learning skills such as chronological thinking, historical comprehension, historical research, historical analysis and interpretation, problem solving, and story telling. Sample lessons and a bibliography of additional resources are included.

Japanese National Committee, International Council on Social Welfare

The following two reports are based on a project that aimed to bring together individuals in the United States and Japan involved in social welfare services. Conceived as an opportunity to mutually exchange information, US social workers visited Japan, where they underwent a joint training with Japanese professionals in Tokyo and observed social welfare facilities in Osaka and Niigata. Participants could exchange knowledge and experience about social welfare and community service with individuals actively involved in the field, such as regional community workers and volunteers. The reports introduce Japanese social welfare services as experienced by the US social workers, with the US community services as a point of reference.

JAPAN-US GLOBAL SCHOOL HANDBOOK: GLOBAL EDUCATION IN THE CLASSROOM (NICHIBEI CHIKYU NO GAKKO KOKUSAI RIKAI KYOIKU HANDOBUKUU)

Curriculum materials developed as a result of the "Setouchi Inland Sea Area Global Education Network Project" conducted in collaboration with Education for Global Involvement, Inc. (Chicago, Illinois). Designed to promote US-Japan school exchange and global education, the material was developed by bringing together US and Japanese elementary and junior high school teachers, conducting pilot classes, and carrying out an evaluation and reflection process. Six lesson plans are presented for each of three themes: environmental education, peace education, and cultural education. Both English and Japanese versions are available so that Japanese and US schools can use the same material and carry out class exchange. The lesson plans—in which students actively learn by carrying out surveys and analysis—are intended to encourage participation.

Public Art Forum: The Fifth National Public Art Forum Takaoka

COMMUNITY REVITALIZATION AND PUBLIC ART: THE ROLE OF CULTURE AND INDUSTRY FOR REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

A report from the National Public Art Forum held in Takaoka, Toyama Prefecture, in October 1998. Public art specialists, local government officials, and citizens meet annually at this national forum to take part in panel discussions, workshops, and lectures on public art. The fifth forum focused on the theme of community revitalization and public art. Public art experts from the United States and members of Japan's public art community discussed the revitalization of local communities and the role of public art as well as issues of art conservation. Program speakers from the United States included Mr. Jack Becker, publisher of Public Art Review, and Mr. Glenn Wharton, a conservator of American art. The report provides a broad overview of current issues being addressed in Japan's public art programs. It contains speeches by keynote speakers of the forum as well as transcripts of panel discussions and workshop summaries that cover a wide range of issues including art conservation, education and art, and citizens' involvement in community development.

Toichi Makita, ed.

Proceedings of a series of symposia held in Nongkhai (November 1994), Hanoi (November 1994), and Tokyo (January 1995) to commemorate the Toyota Foundation's twentieth anniversary. This series reviewed the Foundation's activities over the past two decades and explored new possibilities for the future. The symposia revolved around two main themes: culture and development and culture and globalization. Discussion topics included tourism, ethnic minorities, gender, pop culture, and the conservation of cultural heritage. This volume contains keynote speeches, summaries of panel discussions, and papers from all three meetings.

SAN FRANCISCO AND THE 1951 US-JAPAN PEACE TREATY CONFERENCE

Uldis Kruze

An educational booklet designed to both document and accompany the Center's exhibit of historic photographs of the 1951 Peace Conference in San Francisco. Through annotation of the photographs and more detailed description of what each signifies, the booklet seeks to convey a sense of the atmosphere surrounding the Conference, both locally and internationally, that produced the San Francisco Peace Treaty.

Youth for Understanding Japan Foundation, Inc. (YFU)

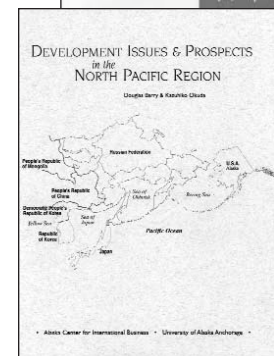

The following books are compilations of award winning essays, written by high school students who participated in the YFU Japan-US Senate Youth Exchange Program. The program provides one US high school student from each state with the opportunity to participate in a six-week visit and homestay experience in Japan. Essays are written in both English and Japanese and draw on the students' experiences in Japan, having gained exposure to Japanese society, and government through visits to Japanese ministry offices and local high schools.
